Laguna Lejía

The route through Talabre and the Kezala petroglyphs leads toward Laguna Lejía, situated at the foot of the volcanic landscape of the Láscar volcano. This experience combines a heritage walk with the observation of lagoons, with the option to extend the trip to Aguas Calientes and Overo, depending on accessibility.

Your itinerary

Talabre and its territorial history.

We head toward Talabre, exploring both the current settlement and the remnants of the ancient village. The guide explains the community's relationship with water and the volcanic environment, while respecting their spaces and adhering to authorized access.

Kezala Petroglyphs.

After passing the access checkpoint, we walk through the ravine where the rock carvings are located. This part of the excursion lasts about an hour; we observe the surfaces from the trail without touching them or altering the site.

Laguna Lejía and lunch.

The track climbs in front of the Láscar volcano toward the area surrounding the lagoon. We stop to take photographs and observe the landscape; we have lunch at a designated spot, ensuring we are sheltered from the wind and taking care not to disturb the wetlands.

Aguas Calientes and Cerro Overo.

The route continues toward the high-altitude salt flat and, on the return journey, passes by the Overo crater area. The specific walking route and observation points depend on authorized access and the time available before returning to San Pedro.
